

FOUR SEASONS PUNTA MITA

BY MICHELLE LYN

MEXICO

A brisk, 45-minute drive north of Puerto Vallarta brings you to the lush, exclusive enclave of Punta Mita, a beachfront village that is home to residential communities, private villas and luxury resorts like the Four Seasons and the St. Regis. The gem of Mexico's Riviera Nayarit, Punta Mita is an easy getaway and with average winter temperature of 75 degrees, you might want to consider packing your bags for the holidays.

The Four Seasons Punta Mita is fit for a king and even if you aren't one, you're still given the same royal treatment. With fresh mango margaritas in your hand the moment you step out of the car, a stunning ocean view to welcome you in the lobby and white sand beaches in every direction, move this resort to the top of your bucket list and go while the dollar is strong.

MORNINGS

Book yourself into an oceanfront casita and take advantage of the empty morning beaches. Go for a stroll on Manzanillas Beach while room service delivers breakfast to your terrace in preparation of your return. Drink your coffee with the natural soundtrack of crashing waves and chirping birds, with the occasional iguana peeking down at you from the treetops.

Rotate your breakfast routine with the Ketsi restaurant, where you can indulge in the daily buffet of Mexican classics like machaca and chorizo and eggs, with an elevated view of the turquoise sea from an open air thatched palapa.

Yoga is offered daily at the fitness center, but if you prefer a bit of pampering, book a Punta Mita tequila massage at the Apuane Spa and let the local spirit cleanse you from the outside in.

If the sea is calling your name, book an early fishing trip out and plan on having the chef cook up your catch for dinner.

AFTERNOONS

The afternoons offer something for everyone. If you have swimmers in your group, take a day trip out to the Marietas Islands where you can snorkel to shore and explore the sanctuary for a complex marine ecosystem that includes dolphins, sea turtles and giant manta rays. If you have the kids in tow, spend the day at the resort, bouncing between the Lazy River, the Kids For All Seasons club and the beach.

The service is incredibly attentive and the moment you eyeball a lounge chair, someone is rushing over with towels and cold, bottled water to set you up for the day. The menu is incredible—fish tacos, cilantro margaritas and the most amazing, gluttonous serving of fresh guacamole you can imagine.

And then, of course, you have all of the 'amenities.' Every hour or so, the servers come by with something to whet your appetite — a mango smoothie sprinkled with tajin, a coconut paleta (popsicle), a cappuccino ice cream something-or-other... all simple, yet thoughtful treats to remind you that you are staying at the Four Seasons, a brand built on luxury service.

If you're vacationing sans tots, sign up for a round of golf on the Bahía Golf Course or spend your day at the infinity pool, the opportunities and spots to relax are endless.

02 Dish as Aramara

03 Room with a view

04 Tamai Pool

03 Catch of the day

04 Terrace at Aramara

The beauty of staying at the Four Seasons is that you really don't need to leave the resort. Ever. There are four restaurants on property, with multiple bars and areas to sit back and have a drink while enjoying the serenity of the scenery.

In the evenings, you might find live music in the lobby, loungey beats from the bar hut on the beach or a secluded cabana where you can retire for a sunset drink. Bahía by Richard Sandoval enjoys a prime spot amongst giant manzanilla trees on the resort's Las Cuevas beach and the food is phenomenal.

Depending on the season, you can also learn about sea turtles and help release them back into the ocean. Definitely a high-light for the whole family.

If you're craving a little nightlife and a couple tequila poppers, head to nearby Sayulita (about a 20 minute drive) where you can eat, drink and shop in the the expat heavy village.
